8	Thomas Alva Edison never met a problem he didn't think he could solve. He was sure that if he worked hard enough and long enough at something, he would eventually discover a way to make it work. And he often did just that. In the process, he developed many inventions that would shape the way we live today. Edison was born on February 11, 1847, in Milan, Ohio. His father, Samuel Edison, Jr. ran a shingle mill and grain business. His mother, Nany Elliott Edison, was a schoolteacher before her marriage to Samuel. Thomas Alva was the last of their...*
